
al Co., L

1

Implication of the Listing Rules

The Listing Rules require companies to disclose information that is likely to be material to investors. This includes information about the company's financial performance, its business operations, its management, and its risks. The Listing Rules also require companies to disclose information about their corporate governance practices, including their board of directors, their audit committee, and their internal controls. The Listing Rules are designed to protect investors and to ensure that the capital markets are fair and efficient.